

Introduction

This report is designed to help you explore possible careers. You can read through the information to help recognise your career interests and understand your personality preferences.

The report is based on your own responses to the questionnaires and the accuracy of the information depends on how honestly you answered the questions.

The information is divided into the following three sections:

- JOIN: This section provides the results from the Jobs and Occupations Inventory (JOIN) and will indicate what your top preferences are in terms of career industries. Understanding your interests can be very valuable when making career decisions.
- Personality: This section of the report provides information on your personality preferences, including strengths and areas you may wish to consider further. You can use this information to help decide what type of career will suit your personality characteristics.
- BANDS: This section of the report provides information about your body clock style and can help you understand when you are likely to be most alert.

The information in the report should be used as a starting point for you to explore possible career options further. Comment boxes will be provided throughout the report to allow you to take some notes.

We recommend you discuss this report with someone else such as a career advisor, friend or family member as well as taking time to read the contents yourself.

Join Introduction

This section of the report identifies your career preferences. First, you will see a graphical representation of all the possible career families and how much you preferred each choice based on your responses to the questionnaire. The report will then provide further information on your top two preferences and specific careers within each family for you to review.

Performing Arts, Broadcast and Media

This industry covers a wide range of roles including music teacher, actors, dancers and DJs. This industry is one which appears to be glamorous, exciting and adventurous; but contracts can be short and demanding, with no regular hours. Time away from home may be necessary for the job.

Hard work, self-confidence and strong communication skills are vital.

This industry is filled with uncertainty; individuals need to have determination and the ability to cope with rejection. However, the entertainment industry is large and needs a variety of skills, including those not in the spotlight, including camera work, lighting, carpentry, electrical installation.

Competition for roles can be strong and getting started can be difficult, therefore persistence and commitment to succeed are important characteristics. Experience, whether paid experience or unpaid could help with securing a job in addition to formal training.

Click on the individual jobs to find out more information about that particular role including typical hours and income, entry requirements, training and development opportunities, the type of skills and knowledge which is required and additional information.

Current Job Vacancies related to this Job industry

Actor	Pop Musician
Animator	Screen Writer
Audio-visual Technician	Stage Manager
Choreographer	Studio Sound Engineer
Classical Musician	Stunt Performer
Dancer	TV or Film Assistant Director
DJ	TV or Film Producer
Entertainer	TV or Film Presenter
Entertainment Agent	TV Production Runner
Music Teacher	Video Editor

Can't find what you are looking for? Want to view other jobs and industries?

Performing Arts, Broadcast and Media

Use the space provided below to note your favourite jobs within this area. Use the information on the links to complete the relevant boxes below.

Favourite Jobs	Hours/Income	Entry Requirements	Training & Development Opportunities	Skills & Knowledge	Your Comments
----------------	--------------	--------------------	--------------------------------------	--------------------	---------------

--	--	--	--	--	--

Education and Social Services

This sector consists of two main occupational groups; the education sector and the social services. Entry into teaching and social service roles is by study and supervised practice.

Being able to motivate others and to give constructive criticism is important for teaching roles.

The education sector can be both challenging and rewarding. Teachers tend to follow regular working hours, which include public holidays and extended summer holidays. Lecturers in universities are expected to pursue further research even outside normal working hours.

Social services involve helping those to overcome difficulties related to physical, mental, environmental or lifestyle problems they experience throughout their life. The aim is to provide advice and support needed to help these individuals cope and move forward in a positive way. Depending on the role, work hours can vary and may involve shift work.

Click on the individual jobs to find out more information about that particular role including typical hours and income, entry requirements, training and development opportunities, the type of skills and knowledge which is required and additional information.

Current Job Vacancies related to this Job industry

Careers Advisor

Care Assistant

Communication Support Worker

Childcare Inspector

Education Welfare Officer

Clinical Psychologist

Further Education Lecturer

Counsellor

Learning Mentor

Drug and Alcohol Worker

Librarian

Housing Officer

Nursery Teacher

Life Coach

Special Needs Teaching Assistant

Occupational Therapist

Teaching Assistant

Social Worker

Youth and Community Worker

Victim Care Officer

Can't find what you are looking for? Want to view other jobs and industries?

Education and Training

Social Services

Use the space provided below to note your favourite jobs within this area. Use the information on the links to complete the relevant boxes below.

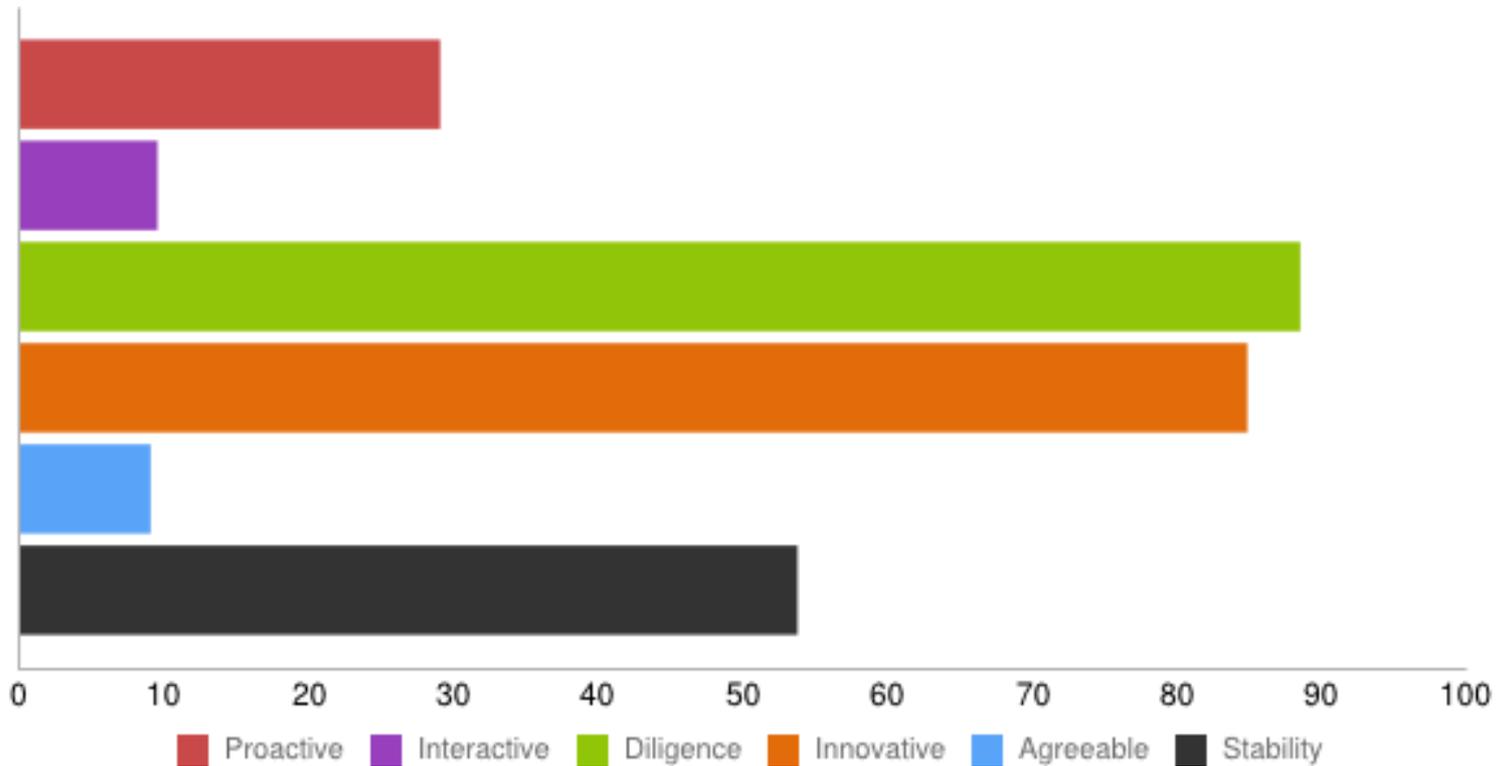

Favourite Jobs	Hours/Income	Entry Requirements	Training & Development Opportunities	Skills & Knowledge	Your Comments
----------------	--------------	--------------------	--------------------------------------	--------------------	---------------

--	--	--	--	--	--

Personality Preferences

This section of the report identifies your personality preferences. This information can be used to guide you to the types of careers within your top preferences which are more suited to you. Read through the information to understand more about yourself, as well as reviewing your strengths and areas you may wish to consider further. Throughout this section of report, there are areas for you to make any comments you have when reading the information.

Below is a summary of you personality profile. The following pages will discuss these results in more detail.

Proactive

Collaborative V Independent

You seem to be the type of person who prefers a well-supervised role where you can ask questions if required. You are likely to be suited in jobs, work, and roles where you are a "teamworker", who can get things done by following a well thought out plan. You respond well to supervision and have no urge or desire to become a leader or tell others what to do.

Strengths

You are likely to be a team player who enjoys working collaboratively with others; seeking advice and support from those around you when required.

Areas to Consider

You may be uncomfortable being in charge of others and making decisions. You could try and make small decisions to help you to become more confident when required to work alone.

Interactive

Reserved V Outgoing

You come across as a quiet and calm individual. You appear to prefer socialising with close friends and would be very uncomfortable if you were made the certain of attention. You seem to enjoy working alone and can often become absorbed in your own tasks. You are likely to enjoy individual activities such as reading or watching TV to help re-charge your batteries.

Strengths

You can keep focus on important tasks and will not be easily distracted by other activities around you. You will take time to reflect and think about the consequences which will help you make good decisions.

Areas to Consider

Others may find you reserved and quiet. While you have the ability to make good decisions, you need to be able to communicate your thoughts with others.

Diligence

Flexible V Structured

You come across as being quite cautious, particularly in unfamiliar situations. You most likely prefer rule-based work and tasks. This is where you can organise what you need to do, and then follow the plan strictly. You seem to enjoy proof reading and double checking the minor details of your work to ensure everything is accurate and of high quality.

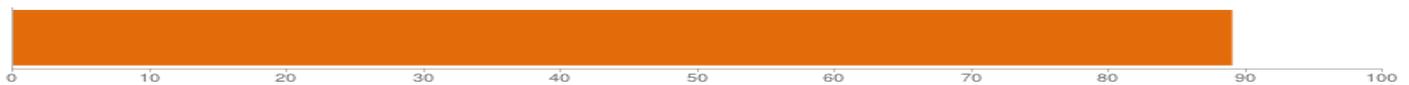

Strengths

You appear to be a highly reliable and dependable person. Your organisational skills and need for achievement enables you to keep great focus on tasks and produce good quality work.

Areas to Consider

Introducing change to your routine may cause some anxiety or even reluctance. You should try and learn how to deal with demands which are out of your control.

Innovative

Traditional V Innovative

You appear to enjoy work and tasks which provide a challenge; which enable you to be involved in new learning experiences. You are likely to have a wide range of interests and the ability to discuss ideas with others. Motivation will be high in environments which provide opportunities for you to use your imagination and find new ways to solve problems.

Strengths

You are inclined to thrive on variety and will be prepared to take risks, particularly when it involves deciding on new and innovative ways to solve problems.

Areas to Consider

You have a curious mind and enjoy problem solving; however you should be careful that you do not spend too long considering several possibilities and overlook established methods.

♥ Agreeable

Impersonal V Considerate

Your results suggest you are the type of person who will concern yourself with your own priorities above getting along with others. You have the ability to express your own opinions regardless of what other people think, even if it will cause conflict. Others may sometimes find you less co-operative and agreeable to work with.

Strengths

Your tough exterior suggests you are not afraid to speak up and present your own opinions. You will be able to make important but difficult decisions if needed to.

Areas to Consider

Your tough exterior could also push others away. You should think about how your actions can affect people. Try to involve others; listen to their feedback and opinions to help create a friendly working environment.

⊕ Stability

Relaxed V Worried

You appear to have an even-tempered and balanced approach to life. You seem to be typical of most people in being able to cope with life's hassles and worries; skills which are valuable when working under pressure. You are able to learn from your mistakes and remain calm under stressful situations. As a result, others will view you as a confident individual.

Strengths

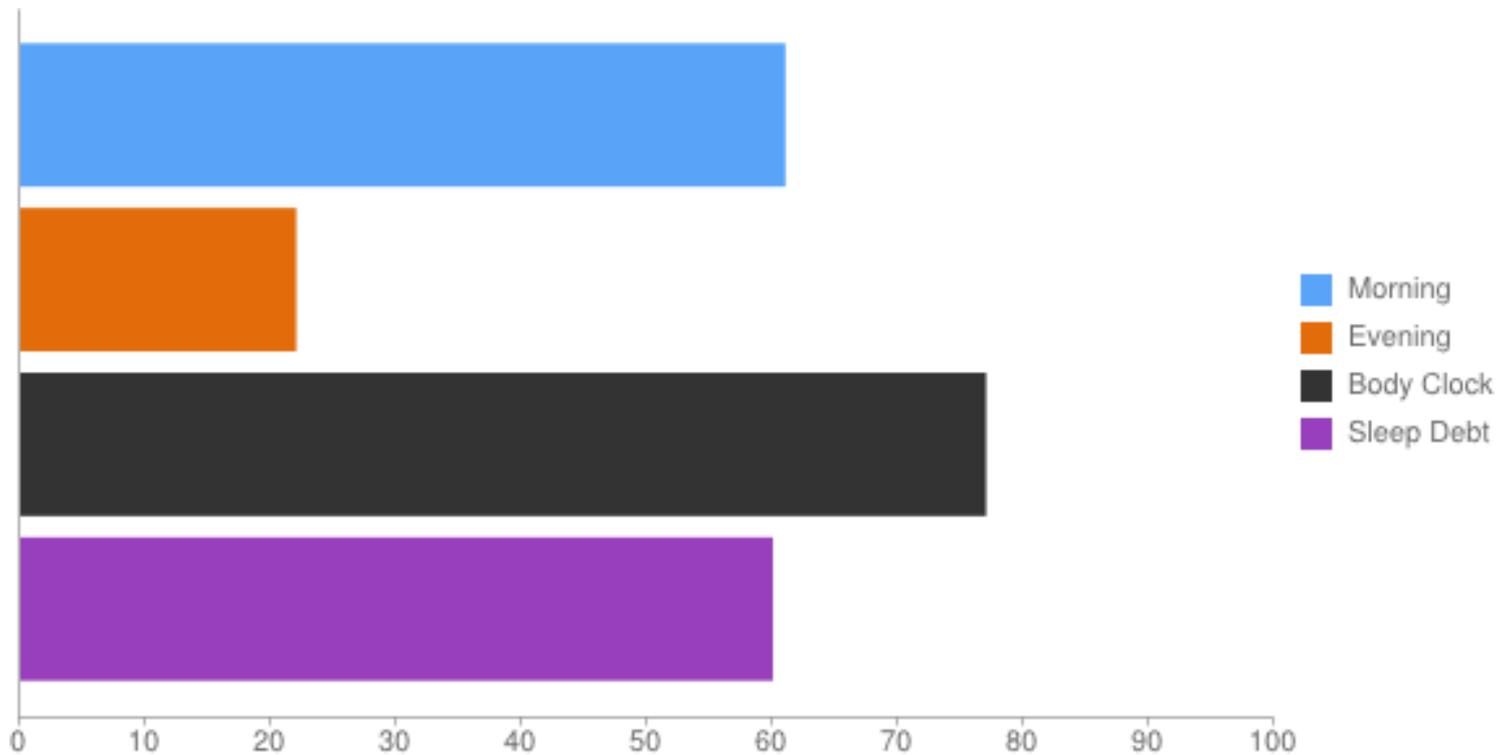

Your unworried approach to events enables you to think in a clear and measured way and you are likely to recover quickly from a stressful event.

Areas to Consider

Although you can cope with the pressures you face, your easy going approach to situations could be viewed by others as a lack of drive or motivation.

BANDS Feedback

This section of the report outlines your body clock preferences. You can use this information to help understand when you are likely to work best.

Equivocal Morning / Not Morning Style

These results cannot classify this person as morning-active.

Apparent Not Evening Style

This individual does not have a strong tendency to prefer working in the evening.

Decisive Regular Time Clock

This individual is a person of regular habits, who prefers order and predictability. If coupled with a morning style they may not persevere over long periods during shift work. A definite 9 to 5 lifestyle seems more suited to this person in a role that requires attention to detail.

Equivocal Large / Small Sleep Debt Account

The results cannot classify this individual's degree of sleep debt.

Response Pattern

Somewhat Narrow Response Style